

ADELAIDE CATHEDRAL PARISH

Thirty-first Sunday in Ordinary Time - Year C

30th October 2022

All Souls Day Reflection

The Church invites us to commemorate all the faithful departed, to turn our eyes to the many faces who have gone before us and who have ended their earthly journey. I would like to offer a few simple thoughts on the reality of death, which for us Christians is illuminated by the Resurrection of Christ, and so as to renew our faith in eternal life.

During these days we go to the cemetery to pray for the loved ones who have left us, as it were paying a visit to show them, once more, our love, to feel them still close, remembering also, an article of the Creed: in the communion of saints there is a close bond between us who are still walking here upon the earth and those many brothers and sisters who have already entered eternity.

Human beings have always cared for their dead and sought to give them a sort of second life through attention, care, and affection. In a way, we want to preserve their experience of life; and, paradoxically, by looking at their graves, before which countless memories return, we discover how they lived, what they loved, what they feared, what they hoped for and what they hated. They are almost a mirror of their world.

Even though death is an almost forbidden subject in our society and that there is a continuous attempt to banish the thought of it from our minds, death touches each of us, it touches mankind of every age and every place. And before this mystery we all, even unconsciously, search for something to give us hope, a sign that might bring us consolation, open some horizon, offer us a future once more. The road to death, in reality, is a way of hope and it passes through our cemeteries, just as can be read on the tombstones, and fulfills a journey marked by the hope of eternity.

Yet, we wonder, why do we feel fear before death? I would say that there are multiple answers: we are afraid of death because we are afraid of that nothingness, of leaving this world for something we don't know, something unknown to us. And then, there is a sense of rejection in us because we cannot accept that all that is beautiful and great, realised during a lifetime, should be suddenly erased, should fall into the abyss of nothingness.

Above all, we feel that love calls and asks for eternity and it is impossible to accept that it is destroyed by death in an instant. The Solemnity of All Saints and the Commemoration of all the faithful departed tells us that only those who can recognise a great hope in death, can live a life based on hope. Humanity can be explained, we find our deepest meaning, only if there is God.

And we know that God left his distance for us and made himself close. He entered into our life and tells us: "I am the resurrection and the life; he who believes in me, though he die, yet shall he live, and whoever lives and believes in me shall never die" (Jn 11:25-26).

(Pope Benedict XVI; General Audience Nov 02, 2011)
